didn't mind being bored.

Second-period students of the day, junior Robert Augustyn and sophomore Matt Melton leaned against their classroom lockers, and stage director Emily Cristoforo, who had also been in class, sat on a bench.

Before class, first-wasn't in class. "I didn't go to class," Miles said. "I got up at 10:30 and I got my car out of the

although students were ready to begin school on August 27, due to inaccessible hallways and an unfinished kitchen and classrooms, the starting date was pushed back first to September 5 and a second time to September 10. Outrageous rumors spread, and it was even suggested that the school couldn't open at all and students would be split up and sent to three different area high schools. However, classes began without a hitch after a 109 day long summer vacation, the longest of any school in Indiana.

Though the postponing may have extended some students' vacations, it also ended some before they began. Fall Break, the vacation days scheduled for Halloween weekend, was revoked along with Martin Luther King Day, Presidents' Day and a snow day. The state of Indiana granted a waiver excusing an additional four days, allowing school to end on its scheduled date and Commencement to go on as planned.

Unfortunately, the confusion didn't end there. Upperclassmen joined the puzzled freshmen in searching for lockers and classrooms in the new 'H' and 'G' halls. Long, often cold, treks outside from the field house to the new halls were necessary until a connecting hallway was usable in November. Then they were replaced by long, often cold, treks in the unfinished area. Unpleasant smells were also common because of the closeness of construction work.

Return from Christmas Break was anticipated, if not for the return to classes, but for the chance to get out of the temporary field house classrooms. Every class was relocated to newly finished rooms in the upstairs 'H' hall, and most gained a new appreciation for silence.

Between new surroundings and old, temporary classrooms and permanent, freshmen and seniors, there was a general atmosphere of being in the middle. Students enjoyed the benefits of a brand new Library Media Arts Center, art, science and math classrooms and a more centralized office complex but still suffered through lack of morning announcements and an auditorium, inaccessible entrances and distracting views of dirt and rubble through class windows. High school marks a time of change and growth, when children become adults, and the half-finished environment magnified this feeling. With the end of construction also loomed the end of childhood and both were equally and eagerly anticipated.

OPENING

by: Mary Turkowski

There is no doubt about the individuality of Griffith's student body. Students expressed themselves not only with clothes and hair fashions, but also through music and, most importantly, attitude. It is the years of high school that children become adults and grow into the people they will be for the rest of their lives.

Opportunities within school and outside the school provide the chance to develop new interests and passions.

Jobs, whether they were a tremendous learning experience in preparation of a great career or simply a sometimes humiliating way to make a little extra cash, ate up a significant portion of time for many students. Often the anticipation of nightlife was the only motivation to keep going.

Annual events like Homecoming, Turnabout and Prom were fun, stress-relieving activities that encouraged meeting new people and often helped young love blossom. Snowcoming, the newest brainchild of the Student Council, was also a welcome though sometimes confusing diversion from the daily grind. It encouraged students to express themselves freely, as long as they were suspension free and wore their cap bills forward.

THE JOYS OF BEING IN LOVE

THE FIRST DAY OF SCHOOL, THE FIRST DANCE, AND THE FIRST BIG GAME. HIGH SCHOOL WAS filled with a bunch of firsts, but one of the most important was first love. Love happens to everyone sooner or later, but the first encounter with these feelings for many occurred in high school.

"My first love has had its highs and lows, but it is all been worth it," said senior Megan Steapleton.

Some met in classes through common friends. For senior Stephanie Kolisz it was at a mutual friend's party.

"We were both at Amanda Laurencell's party and we started talking," said Kolisz of her boyfriend senior Carl Robbins. "We have just been together ever since then."

For many, one of the obstacles of having a boyfriend or girlfriend was his or her parents. For senior Damian Mitchell that was not a problem.

"My mom and my girlfriend get along very well," said Mitchell. "They go to all of my football games together. Sometimes they even do things without me."

When the last dance and the big games were over some would always have their memories of their first love. "Emily German

HAVING THE TIME OF THEIR LIVES

AS SPRING BREAK APPROACHED, WE'RE EXCITED ABOUT THE WEEK OFF, BUT MANY WERE happy because they were leaving for vacation.

Junior Allie Woloszyn went with her family to Tennessee and Florida.

"I had a lot of fun," Woloszyn said. "It was good that I got to go with my family because in two years, I'll be away at college."

Senior Carolynne Joseph wasn't able to go on vacation over spring break because of softball games and practices.

"Since I wasn't able to go anywhere," Joseph said, "I went to the Museum of Science and Industry and I went to Northwestern to watch a softball game on my days off from softball. I was still able to have fun, though."

Senior Carlo Gurrola was able to go to Mexico with some of his friends.

"It was a lot of fun," Gurrola said. "It was cool because it was so much fun with a lot of people that I'm not going to see everyday next year in college. The trip just gave us all one last chance to hang out together before we all go our separate ways."

SOME PEOPLE MIGHT HAVE BEEN WORRIED AT THE THOUGHT OF THE SPEJEWSKI'S RETIRING, BUT but as it turns out, there was no need for worries. Lisa Megquier, English, proved she could take over the demanding job of the director and sponsor.

"I simply love theater," said Megquier, "I acted in college and in the community on and off for the past 10 years. I'm even considering auditioning at IUN again."

Not only is this the first year for the Drama Club, it's also the first time the club decided to perform four smaller plays instead of one.

"It was Mrs. Megquier's idea to do one act plays," said senior Patrick McCarmey. "There were also four students that wanted to be directors, so we each got a play."

Despite all of the obstacles, different locations, having to move the sets in one night, and the new club itself, Megquier plans to continue directing and sponsoring.

Megquier said, "Everything pulled together and worked out how I wanted it to. I'm very proud of what the students accomplished." ~Natalie Mazur

PARKING AND WALKING

WITH THE RENOVATION FOCUSING ON THE NORTH PART OF THE SCHOOL, CONSTRUCTION workers parked in the old senior parking lot and half of the old teachers parking lot was used for outside storage. Many assigned parking spaces were an inconvenience for both the students and faculty, and who got to use them was a major issue. The senior parking lot was the west parking lot and was very inconvenient for seniors when their lockers and the main entrance were on the other side of the school.

"It's unfair for the seniors to have to park on the other side of the school," said senior Matthew Papa. "The sophomores and juniors get to park closer to the main entrance. We have been in GHS longer and should have the privilege to get the convenient, closer parking spots."

For underclassmen it's first come first served in order to get a good parking spot along the football fence on Raymond.

AND THEY KEPT ON DANCING

EVERY YEAR, WHEN ONE SHOULD BE EXCITED about Homecoming activities, the majority of girls are also stressing over who they could ask to turnabout. For some it's easier than others. Many girls have gone with the same guy more than once. Sophomores Claudio Gurrola and Darcy Govert have attended both their freshman and sophomore dances together.

"It's a lot easier because I know that I'll have a good time with her," Gurrola said. "We like spending time together every other day, so it'll be even more fun with the addition of music and dancing and looking nice."

For senior Christina Saldana, who has attended two Highland Homecomings and three Griffith Turnabouts with her ex-boyfriend from Highland, senior Joshua Jabczynski, she agrees with Gurrola but also says that it's not always the best of times.

"It's easier to make plans and you don't have to stress out about who you're going with," Saldana said. "But I'm also kind of glad that I'm going with someone different this year because I'll get to experience what going with someone else is like."

"IT WOULD ONLY BE RIGHT FOR THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS TO GO TOGETHER AND CROWN THE NEW PRINCE AND PRINCESS"

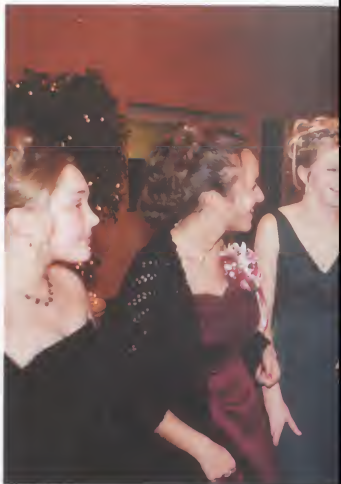

"JON MELENDEZ

Senior Jon Melendez went with fellow senior Emily Gierman their freshman and junior years together because they were crowned Prince and Princess sophomore year.

"I thought it would be fun going with Emily our junior year," Melendez said. "I told her that since we went together freshman year and crowned together sophomore year, it would only be right for the prince and princess to go together and crown the new prince and princess." Stephanie Staples

BEFORE THEY CAN ENTER THE DANCE. The American Society for Testing and Materials (ASTM) has announced that it will be releasing a new standard for the testing of steel reinforcement bars (rebar) in 2003. The new standard, ASTM A618-03, will require that all rebar used in concrete structures be tested for strength and ductility before it can be used.

TAKING THE NIGHTS OFF

DURING A GRUELING 7-HOUR SCHOOL DAY, ALL SOPHOMORE RACHEL ALBRECHT COULD think about was what she was going to do when she got out at 3:00.

"I can't wait until the bell rings. I want to go home so that I can see my boyfriend," Albrecht said.

Some went home to relax or to do homework.

"Sometimes when I get home from school, I have to do my homework before I do anything else like go to a friends house or have people over," said sophomore Krystal Hess. "Then just about all I do is lay back and do nothing."

Some students had jobs to go to.

"I go to work and my boyfriend visits me every single night," junior Michelle McNerlin said.

Others just liked to hang out, by themselves or with friends, at the mall or at the movies.

Junior Summer Granter said, "I usually go to a friends house or to the mall with friends on the weekend."

Senior Joe Martin says some of his favorite places to go are Wrigley Field, Griffith games, the weight room, and to friends' houses. Freshman Tabitha Minton likes to go out with friends.

CHARLIE'S CHOCOLATE FACTORY

EVERYONE KNOWS THE STORY ABOUT A LITTLE BOY NAMED CHARLIE, WHO GREW UP NEVER having a lot of money, yet never minding either until one day he finds the lucky gold ticket in his chocolate bar to go visit Willy Wonka's chocolate factory.

"Mrs Mequier has always liked this play and she has always wanted to do it," senior Christy Clark, who played Violet, said. "I'm glad that we decided on it because it was a lot of fun to do."

Fellow castmate and senior Patrick McCarney who played the well known character, Willy Wonka, liked the play because the characters were interesting.

"At first I didn't like it very much," McCarney said, "but when everything came together I ended up having a lot of fun with it."

This year was the first year Lisa Megquier, English, sponsored the drama department and directed their plays.

"At first I was somewhat scared because I was so used to the Spejewski's directing us," Clark said. "But after the first day, I knew that everything would work out."

"It was different because of the new director had different styles," McCarney said. "There seemed to be a lot of more focus on the technical aspects of theatre than there had been before also."

"I'm happy with the way everything turned out," Clark said. "It was a good end to my last production." Stephanie Staples

He was supposed to give it to me, but instead he said that he thought I had it. Then he said that he was just getting too old when all of a sudden, Kendell (Johnstone) came skipping out asking if someone dropped a golden ticket. I gave her a big hug. No one but Corey and Kendell knew about the joke. It was the funniest thing."

FASHION TRENDS/FADS

GOING TO THE MALL

CLOTHES: THEY'RE A BASIC NEED, BUT WHERE DO MOST STUDENTS GET THEM? THE MALL! Some students, like junior Keenan Hecht go about twice a year, but some students that go every couple of weeks like junior Tarin Blythe.

"I go about once every two weeks to the mall," said Blythe. "I like to go often because the styles change and stores are constantly getting new shipments in."

Students generally know the stores they like and just tend to go to their favorites.

"I enjoy shopping at Express, Abercrombie, Gap, and Wet Seal," said Blythe. "I can almost always find something that I like there. I don't like to leave the mall without any bags, so I usually at least buy a shirt or something."

Guys like sophomore Brett Newman also have favorite stores that they like to hit. "I like to shop at Abercrombie, Hollister, and American Eagle," said Newman.

While going to the mall with friends is usually the norm, Newman and Blythe also go with their moms.

"I like going with my mom because she buys me stuff, but my mom has good taste so I don't mind," said Blythe.

HOBBIES FAVORITES, OR OBSESSIONS?

EVERYONE HAS A FAVORITE CLASS, FOOD OR EVEN TELEVISION SHOW BUT FOR SOME favorites can be taken to the extreme. Senior Teri Calhoun's obsession is a color.

"I love the color pink," Calhoun said. "It is cheery and it fits my personality because I like to be cheerful."

Every student watches television, but for some a show can be taken a step further. Senior Lisa Stalbaum and her group of friends get together every Tuesday night to watch new episodes of 'Real World.'

"It is a lot of fun," Stalbaum said. "We all eat dinner and then watch our shows."

Another obsession that can be centered around is in sports, whether as a spectator or an athlete. For senior Cliff Wilson, his fetish is basketball.

"I love basketball," Wilson said. "It takes up a lot of my time including practices, individual work and also watching the games, but it doesn't bother me."

Many of these favorite pastimes begin at a young age. "I grew up playing basketball and I love the feeling of victory," Wilson said.

SNOW SNOW HERE TO STAY

ON THE WEEK OF JANUARY 27TH, 2008 GRIFFITH High School witnessed a little bit of deja vu. Homecoming turned Snowcoming!

"Since we were unable to do as many things during Homecoming week as we would have liked to," Student Council sponsor Anita Cox said, "Some of the representatives of Student Council came up with the idea of a winter Homecoming."

Senior Alexandra Solis was president of Student Council and said they didn't use all the ideas they came up with.

"Initially we wanted to also have a Snowcoming court," Solis said. "Each grade would nominate a boy and a girl to represent them and they'd be presented at the game along with the senior court. That's how a lot of schools do it for their dances."

Freshman Troyce Wachsetter thought Snowcoming was a good idea.

STUDENT LIFE / ACADEMICS / PEOPLE / ORGANIZATIONS / SPORTS / ADVERTISEMENTS

BEING IN HIGH SCHOOL HAS EXPENSES THAT HAVE SKY ROCKETED TO AN ALL TIME HIGH. ALMOST EVERYTHING costs money to participate in. Having a car comes with other necessities such as insurance, license plates, gas, and car repairs to name a few, and just to participate in sports has become a big expense, buying things like spirit packs, new shoes, or new sports equipment. Because of this, it seems as if a lot more teens these days are getting jobs.

Sometimes it is because they want more things that their parents aren't willing to buy. Junior Becky Stevens only wanted a job at Subway for extra money.

"I got a job because I wanted one and I was getting older and I was sick of asking my parents for money," Stevens said. "But I had to quit because I wasn't making enough or getting enough hours."

It seems the older we get the more we want and the more expensive the things get. It seems as if when we finally become satisfied with what we have, new things just pop up and seem to out do the things that we have worked for so hard already. Freshman Jennifer Handley wants to get a job, but because of work rules she cannot until next year.

"I always want so many different things: CD's, books, clothes. I wish I could get a job already so I can be more responsible and learn how to save money for myself," Handley said.

ALMOST PERFECT WEEKEND

THE PERFECT PROM ISN'T ALWAYS THE reality as much as students hope it would be. With hair, dresses, limos and dates to worry about, the weekend is floating on a whim of hope that everything will just turn out all right and everyone will at least have a good time. With so much to worry about, students are almost guaranteed that at least one thing will go wrong.

Though Junior Abby Hinchy had problems with her dress being a little too tight the day before the dance, she was unaware that this was not going to be the only problem with her dress.

"My friend stepped on my dress right before I was about to take my professional picture and all of the gathering at the bottom came out. We had to safety pin it together so that it wouldn't drag on the floor." Hinchy said.

"Then at the dance I had to take off my dress to go to the bathroom and it got caught on the door and ripped a huge hole in the back of it. But as if that wasn't

THE NERVOUS FEELING BEFORE A SHOW

ALTHOUGH THE TWO SHOWS WERE COMPLETELY DIFFERENT, BOTH THE FASHION SHOW AND THE TALENT show caused anxiety to those who participated. Senior Lisa Stalbaum said that she's never been so nervous.

"The whole day of the fashion show I couldn't stop thinking about it," Stalbaum said. "My stomach was tied up in knots all day."

Junior Shawn Ramsey's performance couldn't have gone better, but right before he was about to go on, he got butterflies.

"I was a little nervous while the other acts performed," Ramsey said, "but as soon as I saw how well Dave [Martin] performed, I just got really excited."

For senior Shawn Bernicky, who performed with a group of other classmates, he wasn't as nervous before the performance as he was last year.

"Last year I was really nervous," Bernicky said. "But this year, it was a lot easier because I had already done it before. It's easier with other people and the hype of the crowd helped a lot, too."

"Even though I was really nervous, I'm glad that I did it because it's an experience that I may never get the chance to have again."

IT'S TIME. THE GRADES ARE IN. THE ANNOUNCEMENTS HAVE BEEN SENT, AND THE GOWNS have arrived. Now there is just one thing left to do... graduate. And one of the major parts of graduation besides receiving that diploma is the graduation speeches. Three students get to make speeches on graduation day: the valedictorian, the salutatorian, and the senior class council president.

For senior Emily Gierman, senior class council president, writing her speech took her a long time. She started putting pieces of her speech together five months before it was due.

"I had been writing different parts of it back in winter and then I actually wrote it about a week before it was due on May 30.

The hardest part of the whole process for Gierman was making the speech while she was trying to hold back tears. Gierman practiced it so many times that she had it memorized and it was good that she did because her eyes were so glazed over from fighting back the tears that she couldn't even see the paper.

"When I was standing up there I could see the faces of everyone in our class and that was what made me cry," Gierman said. "It was so emotional seeing everyone cry that it made me cry even more."

READ the BETWEEN LINES

Even when duties at home, obligations at work and extracurricular responsibilities seemed endless, students had to face

all of these on top of their regular academic coursework.

Labs, projects and group work provided a welcome distraction from traditional class lectures, especially a physics lab which taught students how to make their own ice cream and a psychology project which required students to act as if they had a mental disorder.

Sometimes, however, these activities, with extensive outside research or in-depth analysis, took even more precious time. Thankfully, new Macintosh technology and a generally functioning Library Media Center were readily available for student use.

Even the ever popular field trips had drawbacks, because missing a day of class to visit an art museum or a local zoo could entail mounds of make-up work or even time after school for biology.

The few students who somehow managed to make time for academic competitions, often saw Barbara Deleget, math, who served again as coach for the math and science teams and also took over the position for the fine arts team.

The pace of life rarely slowed. With the omnipresent stress of the construction and without much extra time during passing periods, it was no wonder students were often so tired in class.

OVER-ACHIEVER

You have a lot in common with senior RACHEL GRIMMER. You are highly motivated to do well in school and are almost always willing to go the extra mile. You may even sacrifice fun activities if you have work that needs to be done. Your work ethic is impressive, but don't forget to stop and smell the roses.

SOMEWHERE IN BETWEEN

Just like freshman ANDREW McMullin, you are concerned about your studies, but not to an extreme degree. You usually manage good grades without too much stress, but could probably do better if you applied yourself more. The middle road is often the safest road, but don't be afraid to stray a little and try something new.

You are like freshman NICHOLAS VASQUEZ because school is your last priority. You'd rather spend your time anywhere else, and you can't be bothered to finish any homework. This attitude is dangerous though, and if you want to graduate in 4 years, you might want to think about a change.

Your Favorite Lab

Though science classes can be tedious and boring, labs are often the most popular part of the curriculum.

Mallory Gatlin, 9

"My favorite lab in earth science was when we worked with minerals," freshman Mallory Gatlin said. "When I read about minerals out of the book I didn't understand it as much as I did after the lab."

"I likes labs because they helps me learn more about what the teacher is talking about," Majstoric said.

Exploration

What do labs really do to help us? Do we actually learn anything from doing labs in our science class? Some students say that labs are just for fun, and others say that they learn a little.

Teachers say that labs are a hands on activity and should be a key advantage of.

"I use labs because its a hands on activity," said Julie Wencloff, science. "and it gives the students a chance to experiment, explore, and learn beyond the books."

Labs can be very interesting and at the same time educational, so students can't say they don't have fun learning about odd things in science.

Sophomore Kaitlyn O'Brien enjoys doing labs in her biology class because it helps her understand what they are doing better.

"I need the labs to help me," O'Brien said, "because without them I would probably totally bomb bio."

So teachers don't just use labs to make students have more work, they use them to help students and their grades.

Learning

Learning can be tiresome and boring for some, but teachers are trying to make a turn around for the better. They are trying fun, new, and exciting things in the classroom. They are trying to use different techniques to ensure the development of young minds.

Susan Patrick's, English likes to give out candy bar questions.

"The first person to answer a question correctly gets the candy bar," Patrick's said. Some teachers, like Eric Schilling, math, and Marilyn Young, English, try to form friendships with their students.

"This way the students feel more relaxed and willing to learn," said Schilling.

Some learning methods, like hands on activities, make it a little easier to get a better grasp on the idea being taught.

Presentations, group work, watching videos, and playing games are all ways to make learning a bit more appealing to students.

"Working in group activities is fun and also helpful because two minds are better then one at trying to figure things out. It seems when you're alone you easily get frustrated," said sophomore Brandi Lewis.

Field trips were very popular because leaving the school was always a good thing, especially if it was during the middle of the day.

“For interior decorating we got to go shopping and go on tours of houses,” said sophomore Rachael Albrecht.

Not only are feildtrips a change from the norm, they are also a good chance to learn hands-on.

“Going to the dunes for earth science was a good opportunity to see the outdoors like I had never seen before,” said senior Joseph Martin. “I learned so many things, yet had so much fun.”

One teacher, 20 students and a day of fun. What else could you ask for? Many students enjoyed field trips, though there were not as many offered as back in elementary school days.

"I like to take the students on field trips because they can get hands on experience," said Margie Keithley, family and consumer science.

Keithley believed in field trips and that is why she took many of her class on them. Her textiles class visited Hammond State Street Center, and her interior decorating classes visited a Walter E. Smith furniture store. Keithley also took trips to Arberdene Bed and Breakfast, and the Valparaiso University Art Museum.

"I loved the interior design fieldtrip. We got to see it and experience it instead of just hearing about it," said junior Jennifer Covington.

For Keithley's wardrobe planning and design class, students got to visit Marshall Field's department store in downtown Chicago and learn about make-up application before going to the Chicago Illinois Institute of Art fashion show.

"Field trips are pretty stressful and a lot of work it would be a lot easier not to take," said Keithley, "but definitely worth it because a picture is worth a thousand words." -Emily Gierman

Morning

Waking up to go to school in the morning can be one of the hardest things to do in the day for sophomore Claudio Gurrola.

"Monday is the worst day to have to wake up on," said Gurrola. "It's right after the weekend when you get to sleep in and then you have to try to get used to going back to school and waking up at 7:30 again."

But freshman Ryan Pentress disagrees. Waking up for him is harder on Thursdays because of the scheduled silent reading schedule.

"Thursday is the worst day to wake up for because of reading day," Pentress said, "You have to wait longer for lunch and the hours are all messed up. When I wake up I know that I'm going to have to read, and we have to read books instead of magazines like the other classes get to read. I put sugar on my Cheerios in the morning to help me stay awake during school so that I don't fall asleep."

Electives

For most students making out their school schedule, many have class hours composed of elective classes. Some think of electives as being as easy "blow-off," while for others it means a serious commitment to something they enjoy outside the realm of the required classes.

"I wanted to take the child development class because it seemed to be a fun and interesting class to take," junior Melanie Fuoss said. "I'd seen people who had to take care the the 'Baby Think-It-Over' dolls and I wanted to know about it."

Junior Brenda Bernotus also took an elective class for pure enjoyment.

"I love photography so when the time came available for me to take it I did," Bernotus said. "It's something that I'm really interested in and really like doing."

Other students prefer to take an easier route and take a class just to fill up their schedule.

"I decided to take ceramics class," said senior Dawn Sferruzza, "because I need to fill up an hour and I wanted to give it a try. It's a fun class to take but the more advanced you get the harder the class gets."

The Pros & Cons

By: Kristen Buehler

Projects bring new life to the classroom. Some students to find them more interesting than the traditional approaches.

"In government class we are working on a mock trial project," senior Morris Sims said. "I played the role of the judge because I wanted to be in charge. I don't usually like working with other people on a school project because I don't like depending on other people."

We have to do what?! And it's due when?! When can we get together?! What time's good for you?!?...Research, surfing the Internet, and lots of paper work are all the little things that make up a group project.

Projects are a big part of work assigned to the classroom. Whether it's child development or government class, almost every course requires some sort of group project to be done.

"My favorite group project was in child development class," junior Samantha Drach said. "We made our own families and learned how to budget our money together."

Working on homework projects with other classmates can also be beneficial.

"I like working with people on projects more than working by myself," junior Keenan Hecht said. "It allows me to socialize as well as be productive. I can get things done while I'm working with friends."

On the flip side of working in groups, some people prefer working by themselves.

Senior Brian Miles is one. "I don't like having to rely on other people for homework," said Miles. "A lot of people don't live up to their responsibilities to the group." risten Buehler

The Old...

As students walked into school on the first day back from Christmas break, they noticed a different change of scenery. Blue carpet and full size lockers were just some of the few.

"It didn't feel like we were coming back for the first day after Christmas break," freshman Steven Staples said. "It felt more like it was the first day back from summer vacation. Everything was so different."

Junior Christina Valtierra likes the new rooms and thinks it's a lot better than the fieldhouse.

"It was so loud and dirty in the fieldhouse," Valtierra said. "The new class rooms are much nicer and I can actually hear the teacher."

Junior Ryan Wilson agrees with Valtierra.

"It was too much commotion going on at one time and didn't allow for me to concentrate on what was going on in class," Wilson said. "I definitely don't think that I will miss the the classes being in the fieldhouse. I like things to be quiet."

TECHNOLOGY

Now more than ever students are finding themselves with more assignments that have to be done on the computer.

"In child development we used the computers in the library to research different ways that babies are born," Junior Lauren Convery said.

Having the computers available in the library made it easier for students to get their work done.

"It helped a lot not having to go home and work on the paper."

Conver said. "I didn't have to worry about my mom needing the computer and I had more time to get all of my other homework done."

On the other hand, when working with something new, there is always something bound to go wrong.

"I do like doing group work because you don't have to do all the work by yourself and it's easier to work with a group. Sometimes some people do end up doing all the work though," said Rybacki.

Hard at work, junior Amanda Anderson gets over a presentation with her group, Kristina Kravak's 11th grade English class. In presentations on "The Tell Tale Heart" by Edgar Allan Poe.

Filled in on the puzzle, sophomore Todd Polgar and Megan Sudac do a crossword puzzle after a movie. Many teachers use an group work after movies.

Working diligently, freshman Veronica Cook and Lisa Dimos put the finishing touches on a project. The two often worked together in Jack Gable's class.

In Groups

The saying goes that two heads are better than one. Maybe that's why many teachers use group work to have students complete assignments. Some students enjoy group work because it is easier than doing work alone and takes less time. Sophomore Jon Ashenbaugh agrees.

"I like doing group work because it is a lot easier with more people than doing it individually," said Ashenbaugh. "Also, you can compare answers, and it makes doing the work go by a lot faster."

However, one student often gets stuck doing all the work, while the others in the group take credit. Junior Joshua McFadden thinks that he is the one that usually ends up doing the work when in a group.

"I don't mind group work, but it is unfair because someone always ends up doing all the work," said McFadden. "I'm usually the one that ends up doing the work, but I don't really mind because it's better if everyone gets an A."

It's

Fun Because

Taking an IR class not only is an alternative to the same curriculum but for some students it more fun also.

"I like taking my IR when Mrs. [Nannette] Naranjo is teaching her middle school class because I get to help out with the little kids and teach them French," junior Amanda Cervantes said.

Senior Teri Calhoun likes having the Edge, a student produced magazine as an IR.

"It allows me time to create a magazine for students by students. It's fun when everyone comments about how much they like reading it," Calhoun said.

Typing on the computer in her second semester, senior Amanda Cervantes is also working on the magazine.

An IR?

It's your last year of school and they don't offer the class that you want to take. For most students this means another filler class with some pointless elective that doesn't have to do with anything that you want to do with your life or are even interested. But for senior Scott Hudnall that isn't the case. Hudnall chose to take an independent research class better known as an IR.

"I chose to take an IR mostly because the school doesn't have a French IV class."
Scott Hudnall-12

IR mostly because the school doesn't have a French IV class," Hudnall said. "I wanted to take French IV so that I could try to test out of a couple French classes in college. That would save a lot of time and money.

There are also other benefits to taking an IR.

"There is a lot more freedom involved in doing assignments on your own and making up your own schedule," Hudnall said.

INDEPENDENT RESEARCH

Reading the book for independent research. Nicole Zakrzewski writes in Spencer's room.

Sitting in the computer class, sophomore Daniel Davis looks at a screen. He took a class in independent research to graduate his class.

WHAT ^{kind of} PERSON are YOU?

1. You realize you have nothing planned for this Friday night. What do you do?

- a. Call your best friend. They probably have something. Maybe you can hang out together, you can make up with somebody, etc.
- b. Choose a party name. There's always a party a corner, isn't it?
- c. Wait until Friday afternoon, be seen, wait for a guy who can afford to go out, anyway.

2. It's your first day of classes and you know absolutely no one in your math class. What do you do?

- a. Keep quiet. If you don't say anything, maybe no one will notice you.
- b. Say "Hi" to the person sitting next to you. He looks like a nice enough guy.
- c. Tell your life story, so anyone who knows someone you're also seen about, your personal life.

3. They're picking teams in gym for dodgeball. You...

- a. Work in your friend, one in the opposite, so they know about you.
- b. Say "HE PICKED ME! I GOT A GOOD TEAM!" and head contact with the opposite side, you don't feel like you're picked last.

4. How long have you known your best friend?

- a. Forever. It's like you, a long time to know someone, and you know each other.
- b. A few days. They're really good, so you should know them.
- c. Not too long. They're really good, but you totally missed them, so they're amazing, and they're so good.

5. Your favorite class is...

- a. Biology. The teacher keeps you going all hour, you don't have time to think about anything other than your work.
- b. Art and class. The atmosphere and music you can get your work done, and it's so interesting, and it's fun.
- c. English or foreign language. They're all interesting, and it's fun to learn.

6. You are not very athletic, but you don't mind playing...

- a. Pick up some weight, your friend, they don't take it too seriously.
- b. An individual sport, to get some exercise. You like swimming or running.
- c. Anything where you're in the team, you like all kinds of you.

7. Your choice of music always is...

- a. Drive. You get to hear (well, sing) all period.
- b. Band. You'd rather express yourself without your voice.
- c. Mother. You are not musically inclined in the least.

8. During a free "study hall" day in 5th class, you can be found...

- a. Telling everyone the funny story about my... (it's always got to do with my classmate).
- b. Working in a small group on my homework, and making fun of the other students, don't.
- c. Listening. Studying for the test, because they call it "study" and it's a reward.

Add up your answers: 1. a-3, b-1, c-2 2. a-1, b-2, c-3 3. a-2, b-3, c-1

4. a-1, b-2, c-3 5. a-1, b-3, c-2 6. a-2, b-1, c-3 7. a-3, b-1, c-2 8. a-3, b-2, c-1

<8-13>
INTROVERT
You are like a sophomore.
D O N
GADBERRY, because you like to keep to yourself. Very few people know you well, and this can keep you from getting hurt, but sometimes this may also keep you from feeling anything. Don't forget your alone time, but consider inviting someone in with you.

<4-9>
SOMEWHERE IN BETWEEN
Just like freshman KENDRA TERZARIAL, you have found a good balance between keeping secrets and letting people know you. You are generally fun and easy to be around. Continue making good choices and you will be rewarded.

<20-24>
EXTROVERT
You have a lot in common with a sophomore.
CHARLOTTE JOSEPH you are very loud and energetic, and it seems that everyone knows everything about you. You love to talk and just generally get attention. This attitude is sometimes not appropriate, however, and it's important that you keep that in mind.

MINI

While getting a pass written for them, freshmen Trenton Keelen and Christina Lozano share a joke with their senior, Dave Lutes. "Physical education class is a funny, funny man," Keelen said.

On one of the last days of school, senior Julie Connell takes advantage of a free day in community to read Lord of the Flies. Half of her English final was over the novel, so William Golding.

Consulting each other, freshmen Adam Brandner and Tabitha Minton fill in their vocabulary books. "The class book helps a lot, but I don't like doing it," Minton said. "I usually copy."

While carefully shaping fine beads, freshmen Bridgett Vechey and Krystal Chandler check out each other's handwork. After making the beads, the jewelry class strung them on a necklace or bracelet.

Getting good grades was not what high school was all about. Though parents might disagree, growing up, forming friendships and staying out of trouble ranked as more important to students in the grand scheme of things.

Whether as seniors with uncertain futures ahead or freshmen with an uncertain present, worry and the desire to fit in dominated students' thoughts.

Sophomores and juniors, somewhere in between the newbies and the veterans found time between organizing Turnabout and Prom to make their mark here. Some earned leadership positions in clubs, like drum major of band or co-president of International Club, but others simply defined themselves by making a new friend, maybe older, maybe younger, or making a fashion statement, maybe "bondage pants," maybe a tattoo or piercing.

Senior Class Council recognized the diversity of the student body and expanded the standard senior superlatives to include more personal awards. They also left the younger generation wondering who they would vote for "Most likely to live in G-Town forever."

Even faculty were caught somewhere in between innocence and experience with three department heads teaching for their last year and seven new teachers joining the staff.

As classes began winding down, the once fractured groups seemed to find an intimacy which had been missing all year and drew together.

Winding up senioritis Justin Tristin, Quince Ballas and David Collier are enjoying a relaxing period. Taking senior photos, with assistance of the assistant staff at the senior center.

CATCHING SOME ZZZ'S

On the day the basketball fortnightly women Elizabeth Jones really fell asleep. Elizabeth took a little nap to refreshen the tired body. Elizabeth was not the only one to do so.

DIGGING IN

Surefooted, ensuring the final plans, senior Emily German doing last minute cake decorations. "I love the decorations, the cake is the main thing, but the decorations are the fun part," said German. "I don't mind doing it, it's just a lot of work, but it's a lot of fun." She is currently working on the final touches of the cake.

Do you have any CrAZy superstitions?

"Yes, I am still an extremely superstitious person. I throw salt over my shoulder, never walk under ladders, always make sure not to walk on cracks, and only pick up pennies if it's on heads."

-Katie Aljosa

"Leprechauns and their pots of gold. And breaking mirrors is bad luck."

-Douglas Mills

"I believe that if you break a mirror it's seven years bad luck. I also have to knock on wood when I say something I don't want to happen."

-Jacquelyn Kobeski

"I don't walk under ladders and when someone says the same thing as me or I say the same thing as them, I jinx them."

-Andrew Espinoza

Q: "If I had to wear one thing for the rest of my life..."

A: "I would definitely wear my track sweatpants with Katie Stipe's T-shirt because they are both really comfortable." -Belinda Sendejas

A: "My Levi jeans because they're the best, my T-shirt, and my orange and blue flip-flops." -Justin Lagestee

A: "It doesn't really matter to me, but if I had to choose I would wear khaki shorts, a patterned shirt and my tennis shoes." -Michael Cahill

SERVICE WITH A SMILE

For going down the Granddaddy parade float, the GPR maintenance crew was to "infiltrate" the parade. "The most memorable part of the parade," said junior Kieran Hoch, "was when our 'Un-lucky' float, the tired and we had to fix it on Broadway Street."

KEEPING IN TOUCH

While this walk had halfway a turn,
Luann Morgan, social studies, caught up with senior Justin Keelen. "I try so hard to keep my classroom as close to the real world as possible," Morgan said.

THE TRUTH ABOUT JUGGLING

As an ongoing enrichment for the students of the Juggling Company, the Juggling Company's Theresa Ramos sponsors ACE's Juggling Company. Lauren Convery and Jimmy Long and Jugglers Teri Calhoun and Lisa Stalbaum. Ramos only sponsored the ACE's program for one year.

Before an All-Region Honor Band performance, freshman Andre Rodgers opens his case to retrieve his alto saxophone. To be in Honor Band, I was recommended by Mrs. [Dale] [sic] and I had to audition," Rodgers said.

Annually, to get elected, juniors Christina Saldana, Rochelle Huber, and Stacey Caron sit on the senior class "list" before the Homecoming parade. Nearly all school clubs participate in the parade before the Homecoming football game.

WHAT KIND OF MEMBER ARE YOU?

1. As a freshman club meeting, the sponsor asks for volunteers to head up a new committee. Where can you be found?

- a. In the front row, raising your hand to volunteer.
- b. Hiding in the back, trying to wake up.
- c. Still at home, roused with the alarm clock.

2. Your club is holding elections for next year's officers. Are you running?

- a. Maybe, but only for something without real responsibilities, like vice president.
- b. Yes! Your campaign is already underway, and you have some great new ideas for next year.
- c. You're interested? No way.

3. Your attendance at club functions is...

- a. Limited to the parties. You like looking back and being a good time, but putting it all together isn't really your thing.
- b. Every once in a while. You say you're busy, so remember when the meetings are convenient and optional.

4. During club brainstorming sessions, your ideas are usually...

- a. Very creative and plausible, but the club already chooses.
- b. Well intended, but quickly disregarded.
- c. Clever, but not always unrealistic.

5. You joined the club because...

- a. It sounded like something fun to do after school.
- b. You needed activities to keep your college applications busy.
- c. You really believe in the cause, that the club deserves.

6. You are along really well with the club sponsor because...

- a. He/she does disregard all your suggestions and talk to much other about their other club, the club, too.
- b. He/she worked together closely to accept all of the club's high activities.

7. How much money did you raise for your club's fundraiser?

- a. You met your quota by asking for your grandparents and aunts big dollar gift.
- b. It was some new club money.
- c. You couldn't be bothered to sell anything. You're too busy to say hello.

8. How well do you know your fellow club members?

- a. They're like your second family.
- b. Not very well. You don't see them very much.
- c. You get along with most of them, but there are a few that you don't really know.

ACTIVE (8-13)
You are like senior JACLYN GERDES because you dedicate lots and lots of time to clubs. You could almost function as the sponsor. This dedication is admirable, but there can be more to life than high school clubs.

SOMEWHERE IN BETWEEN (14-19)
You are like junior TIFFANY LINDSAY. Clubs are fun but they are not necessarily your first priority. Joining clubs just because your friends did or you heard they throw lots of parties is fine, but a club experience can be more meaningful if you truly care about it.

INACTIVE (20-24)
Like freshman MELISSA RUTHERFORD, you love the number of clubs you join. You are rather unmotivated when it comes to devoting your time, so you chose not to be involved. The choice is certainly yours, but if you find a club that really interests you, you might be more active.

Add up your answers:

Which club to join?

W This perpetual question had a few more possible answers, with a new Drama Club organizing and an International club springing from the now defunct French and Spanish clubs. Band and choir also seemed completely different than in past years. Both musical clubs came under new leadership, and while the band experienced growth and went on several field trips, the choir hit a few bumps and ultimately lost their sponsor.

Making deadlines came easier for Panther Press and Reflector under the guidance of a new advisor, and the staffs came together with a lot of unity thanks to Quill & Scroll, a journalism club that held a Christmas party and end of year banquet.

On top of the typical tasks of organization and money making, clubs like Student Council tried to introduce new activities for the entire student body like Snowcoming. Honor Society created a spirit of giving by visiting a local seniors' center.

Frenzied club activity offered something for almost everyone, and also the opportunity to create a new club if not already offered. A Gay-Straight Alliance appeared for a short while, faced a strong opposition, but eventually disbanded because founders felt its objectives were being reached and the formal club setting was no longer necessary.

MAKING

The Deadlines

*Christina Boncela

It's crunch time in the journalism room. There's a deadline after school and junior Emily Etheridge is working hard in the darkroom in order to finish her photo assignment and make the deadline.

"It's really hard trying to balance different activities after school and still make all of the scheduled deadlines," Etheridge said. "If I don't finish my work then other people can't finish their work."

Sophomore Megan Sudac also agrees at the difficulty of trying to fit everything in and still have time to make deadlines.

"The hardest part about trying to make a deadline is balancing your time out to fit everything in," Sudac said.

Sudac tries to make a schedule so that she doesn't fall behind and have to do everything at the end.

"I try to get a time schedule planned out so I know where to be at what time and how much time I have to spend," Sudac said.

Sometimes Sudac got stressed out trying to handle basketball,

Panther Press and other activities.

"I have a hard time balancing my schedule and sometimes it is really stressful," Sudac said.

Senior Stephanie Staples also tends to get stressed out around deadline time.

"I get really worried about everything like spelling somebody's name wrong or forgetting a tiny detail or identifying the wrong person," Staples said.

"There's a lot of little details that you have to worry about and it really hard to make sure that everything is perfect."

Staples felt even more pressure because she held a position of leadership.

"This year, I am the Student Life editor and the managing editor," Staples said, "so I have a lot more to do than I did last year, but I would never give up yearbook because it's definitely worth it."

Staying after for Art Club, junior Matthew Gadberry works on an art project. Gadberry was rushing to finish his project so that he could get home.

WORKING

As One

-Christina Boncela

Spanish Club and French Club are now a thing of the past. This year they were joined in hopes of increased attendance and a better multicultural understanding of different ethnicities, but the retained a main focus of Spanish and French customs.

Sponsors felt that experiencing more cultures could be more interesting than just studying the same traditional ones.

"International Club allows you to see cultures from other countries rather than just the French culture like before," said Nannette Naranjo, French.

Naranjo was really happy about the way that things worked out.

"Because last year we were separate, we had low attendance, and this year after combining them we had more numbers and we were able to do more things and go on more field trips," Naranjo said.

International Club went to see a Spanish dance festival and to see the way different countries decorated their Christmas trees at the Lansing Public Library. They went to a art painting project class and took an after school trip to Cafe Fondue.

"We also celebrated the Day of the Dead and we had different movie nights," junior Emily Etheridge said.

It was also easier on the teachers to be able to run the club together where as before they each would have had to run a separate club by themselves.

"You have two people working on projects, so if I forgot something then Mrs. [Katherine] Martinez would remember it, or vice versa," Naranjo said.

Joining the clubs together also allowed for a more diversified group of people.

"You make a lot more friends in International Club than you would in just French or Spanish Club," said sophomore Whitney Gasaway.

"You make a lot more friends in International Club." -Whitney Gasaway, 10

Looking at the night with the Drama Club meeting. Freshman Andrew McMullen and senior Jaclyn Gerdes are performing in their drama club. The club was in charge of organizing a drama workshop for community youth in the center.

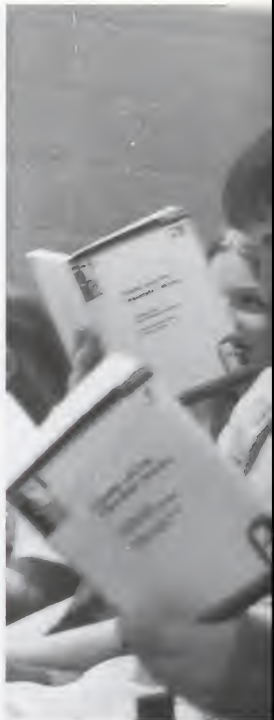

At an International Club party, Juniors Katie Abascal and Emily Etheridge chat as they eat. "The Mardi Gras party was fun," said Abascal. "It was a good way to celebrate all the work we've done"

Practicing songs for the spring concert, freshmen Christopher Fuoss and Joshua Etheridge belt out a melody. The choir department canceled their fall concert this year due to extenuating circumstances.

At an Art Club meeting, junior Ashley Hooper signs in. "Art club is a fun way to get together with other people who enjoy art," said Hooper.

LET'S GET ORGANIZED

*Stacey Caron

Planning meetings, events, fundraisers, and activities can be hard work. Clubs needed to have a good sense of organization to get it all done. Usually the president or leader of the club was in charge of organizing everything.

As president of student council, senior Alexandra Solis said that she took many steps to get events organized.

"First, I introduce what it is we are going to be doing," said Solis. "I then ask for a volunteer to chair a committee. Whoever wants to help with the project joins the committee, and then those people are in charge of it."

Student Council has organized many events this year, including Pennies for Paws, Homecoming, and Snowcoming. Solis says that sometimes it is hard to find interest in the projects.

"It is not as hard to organize as it is to find members who want to help out with all our activities," Solis said.

Junior Christina Boncela is the co-president of International Club, whose organization process is done a little differently.

"We have meetings with just the officers, where we discuss ideas to suggest to the rest of the club," said Boncela. "At the next meeting we present those ideas, and get feedback."

Sometimes it's necessary for a sponsor to lend a helping hand.

"Mrs. [Nannette] Naranjo and Mrs. [Katherine] Martinez do a lot of work to help us out with the organization," said Boncela. "It can be hard to get everything organized with such a large group of people."

"It is not as hard to organize as it is to get members involved."

Thinking before her big performance, sophomore Kara Johnson says to herself, "Playing my instrument is fun," she said, "but singing it wasn't fun."

Being just a boy, Lyndley Clarkson made sophomore Beshears feel like a girl. "I don't like to sing," sophomore Jim Swenconek said, "and the lyrics are fun too."

MUSIC

—Tineetha Jones

The choral department went through a tremendous change. Linda Leonardo suffered numerous problems with her back and ultimately underwent back surgery, which left most of her classes with a substitute teacher. The longest serving substitute, Eddie Covarrubias, a Griffith alum, was very influential with his choir students. He was almost universally well-liked.

Freshman Brandon Pollard said, "We always manage to sing more with Mr. [Eddie] Covarrubias." —Brandon Pollard, 9

Most of the choir students agree that without Covarrubias, the choir could not have performed at all.

Band, the only other musical elective offered, also experienced extreme change. The new band director, Craig Phipps, was hired hardly a week before the school year began. The marching band was unprepared to begin their season, but after working hard in the first few weeks of school, eventually made it onto the field.

"I was so glad that we got out there and marched," sophomore Jovanka Balac said. "I would have been really mad if I didn't get to be the drum major this year."

The Pantherettes were among those happy to have the band back on the field.

"We had to use a recorded tape to do our dance in the first few games," senior Melissa Powell. "It sounded bad over the speakers, so we were glad when the band was there with us."

Although the music department made radical changes and wasn't quite able to reach to the peaks of excellence that they had in the past, Phipps is optimistic about the future.

"It wasn't realistic for us to be the best and make it to state this year," Phipps said, "but I'm pleased with the start we made."

Referee [Eddie] Balac, seniors Christina Redden, Lauren Jajowka, Amanda Baran and Kristin Domsic performed their "Gasmanes" (chorus) traveled through the hallway during the fourth hour to spread Christmas cheer.

"Act well your part; there all the honor lies."

This is the motto of the first ever branch of the International Thespian Society at Griffith High School. Seven drama students, seniors Jaclyn Gerdes, Christy Clark, Patrick McCarney, Adam Ryzk, and Corey Hecht, and juniors

Keenan Hecht and Taylor Morton were the first inductees, each qualifying with more than 300 hours of drama service in at least two areas of production. All also performed in at least two productions for Griffith High School.

"We started with seven and now have fourteen members. It is pretty exciting," said Morton.

To become a member, students had to earn ten points, one point being the equivalent of ten hours of work for the drama department.

"I think that this is good because it shows recognition to those who have actually worked the hardest," said Clark.

Now as a branch of the International Thespian Society, the group could compete at seminars.

"It will actually benefit the younger classes more than the first inductees, but it was important that we got it started for them," said Clark.

Seated at left, seniors Jaclyn Gerdes and Christy Clark lead the first ever International Thespian Society. The student department was one of the new additions to the school's offerings.

Looking at a landfill display at the Museum of Science and Industry, sophomores Claudio Gutrola, Kevin Torok and Brett Newman lean over to examine the exhibit. "Field trips are good because you have fun but and learn too," said Gutrola.

Showing them around the dark room, freshman Lyndee Carlson and senior Nicole Carlson film a Boy Scout troop about demolishing and throwing pictures. "The boys were all very excited about the thinking door leading into the dark room," said Nicole.

Applying mascara, freshman Ashton Kepple puts the finishing touches on Junior Keenan Hecht. The two appeared in Dessert Theater together. "I really enjoyed being in Drama Club and it was a lot of fun to do Keenan's makeup," said Kepple.

Making posters, giving blood and showing a movie all are things that different organizations do throughout the year. Though the activities vary, they all have one thing in common: making the high school experience a little more exciting then classes and homework.

Booster Club's main priority was to decorate athlete's lockers and hallways during sport seasons. This club consists of all the cheerleaders and Pantherettes and also any other student willing to decorate.

"I like Booster Club a lot because it is fun to hang out with all the cheerleaders," said sophomore Brittany Miller. "It is also nice to make posters for all the people in sports because they work so hard."

Honor Society held a blood drive. The annual event is usually held in the field house, but because of the construction it was located at the Heartland Blood Center.

"It was kind of different having it there," said senior Christina Redden.

With the threat of war with Iraq omnipresent, the blood drive was even more important for some.

"I think the blood drive is a very important thing that the school does," said Redden. "It helps out a lot of people, especially these days."

ROLLIN' In The Dough

—STACEY CARON

Spirit packs and equipment don't come free. Teams and clubs often have to fundraise to help afford these extra perks. This year, selling Krispy Kreme donuts and cookie dough were popular choices for fundraisers. The girls' softball team sold cookie dough to raise money for their spirit packs.

Senior Rochelle Huber, thinks that the fundraiser was successful.

"I think the fundraiser went well," said Huber. "People know that the cookie dough is good from other fundraisers, so they buy more tubs of it. We ended up selling a lot."

The International Club sold Mardi Gras the week before Mardi Gras to raise money to be able to go on more outings and field trips. For a quarter, students could send their friends a strand of beads and a fun message. Sophomore Whitney Gasaway helped in the selling.

"I think the fundraiser was successful because we made over $200," said Gasaway.

Sometimes fundraising can be hard work, and take up a lot of time.

Gasaway thinks it is worth it though.

"It is definitely worth the hassle because when the club has money in the fund, field trips and things don't cost as much for us," said Gasaway. "I think fundraising is fun and it's for a good cause."

Huber agrees, and thinks clubs should fundraise as much as possible.

"I like fundraising because it really helps out, and you can get things you normally wouldn't," Huber said. "It does have its disadvantages, but in the end it is all worth it."

WHAT KIND OF PLAYER ARE YOU?

1. If a referee makes a call that you don't agree with, what do you usually do?
 - a. Argue with them loudly and they change it on spot, you win the game.
 - b. Use your anger so calmly that the rest of the team joins.
 - c. Tell them the more headstrong members of the team they should listen to the game.
2. What's your preferred method of training?
 - a. Always training in your own room.
 - b. Practicing in the gymnasium. You find someone to train for you, and then you look for them.
 - c. Your routine changes with you, but you don't stop.
3. You've been starting in varsity since...
 - a. sophomore year. Coach liked your own dedication.
 - b. junior year. The competition for starting players was really fierce.
 - c. freshman year. Your accomplishments spoke for themselves.
4. During practice you can be found...
 - a. Alone in a back. The rest of the team really looks up to you.
 - b. Running drills. Coach makes you do them for a reason, you get better.
 - c. Making up your own drills. You like trying new things.
5. How do you feel about the rest of your team?
 - a. They're a great group of people, and the team would be the same without them.
 - b. You kind of look up them as your enemy (hate).
 - c. They depend on you, and you're always there for them in any case.
6. When you're not playing, some of your favorite activities are...
 - a. Driving around with your friends. You're usually the driver.
 - b. Reading by yourself.
 - c. Drinking lemonade around town, but you'd never get into trouble.
7. If you got kicked out of a game, it was probably because...
 - a. You created a score after your team had lost.
 - b. A disqualification or foul occurred.
 - c. The whole team walked off and you were at the front of the line.
8. Have you ever fouled out of a game?
 - a. Only once, because coach asked and to save the fans.
 - b. Nope, never.
 - c. A few times, but that's just part of the game.

DEFENSIVE
You are like
CAVAZOS, a linebacker on the football team. You are the strong backbone without which the team couldn't function. You often are not in the spotlight like offensive scorers are, but you are content to stay in the background and help the team that way.

(14-19)

SOMEWHERE IN BETWEEN
Like junior ALEXANDER TSIRTSSIS, state champion wrestler, you prefer individual sports. You enjoy the camaraderie of the team practices and meets, but when it comes time to perform, it's all up to you. You are a very independent athlete and can proudly claim all of your achievements as distinctly your own.

(20-24)

power pitcher
for the volleyball team, is a lot like you. You are the strong force scoring points, baskets, goals or whatever it may be. You are a powerhouse when playing, probably the star of the team. Without you the team would be lost.

Fighting off his opponents, junior Stephen Fry tries for a 14-up. "I thought we had a good season," Fry said. "We got a lot of good press because of Kenny [Harris]."

Contorting her body to clear the bar, sophomore Rosalinda Sendejas competes at track sectionals at Highland. "High jump was fun because it helped me beat my races," Sendejas said.

At the line of scrimmage, the football team's offensive line gets ready to do the job against Munster. The game was tough because of cold and rainy weather.

Playing in the Railroaders stadium was a change of pace for the baseball team, and so was their 1-0 win over Indiana. "It was a great game," senior Jordan Buzza said. "We really wanted that win."

NOTHING CAN COME BETWEEN US

The fighting Griffith spirit was never so apparent as at a sporting event. Not only football and basketball, but also wrestling, baseball and softball saw huge crowds and enormous peer support. The Booster Club led the way, but when members of almost every sports team advanced to sectionals or beyond, the panther fan wagon was filled to capacity.

In the fall season, after senior Kristen Buehler broke two school girls' soccer records, the team lost a heartbreaking sectional game to Highland. The boys' team, though led by a strong group of returning lettermen, lost some of them for a few games to suspension, which hurt the team in the end. The football team became sectional champs, but couldn't move beyond regionals. Though a few individual runners advanced to regionals and junior Tommy Cunningham made it to semi-state, the cross country team as a whole had a few setbacks.

In the winter season, both girls' and boys' swimming found themselves thrifd at sectionals. While girls' basketball had a tough loss to Calumet in the sectional championship, the boys' basketball team were conference champs for the second year in a row. The state runner-up wrestling team, boasting three individual state champions, was the pride and joy of the athletic department.

In the spring season the baseball team upset Andrian at the Railcats stadium and the softball team became sectional champs again. The track team sent junior Erica Naaman to state and the golf team, even with several returning seniors, couldn't make it out of sectionals.

Putative "movers" of a different color: Jordan Buzea, 40, who ran the operation from 1997 to 2004. "I've moved Atlanta to make it a good location," Buzea says. "I've got 20 years' experience. I've got 100,000 e-mail addresses and a million more. I have computer skills, and I've got a good marketing plan and a lot of contacts. I've got a good business plan, and I've got a good business plan."

Jennyfer Jolie, 29, the wife of actor Daniel Blount, 34, says she has a "strong intuition" about Blount. "We had a little intuitive heart-to-heart in the kitchen. My body showed me the true year would be 2010, which we both decided to use. I just knew."

A black and white photograph of a male athlete in motion, likely a runner. He is wearing a dark singlet with a white bib that has the number '1243' and the word 'ATHLETE' above it. His head is tilted back, and his mouth is open, suggesting exertion. The background is blurred, showing other people and what appears to be a track or outdoor setting.

Receding after their first personal loss, the volleyball team gives hugs to fellow teammates. The sectional game lasted. Andean was the favorite, and junior Laura Pinkerton, because she just played them and knows them that well, couldn't them.

Running after a good game, Laura Pinkerton, Tarin Blythe, and senior Angelina Hanson celebrate a win. After every point, the players get together and cheer to celebrate the score.

Playing with endless enthusiasm, Sara Brines makes a pass. "I like to play soccer this season," said Brines. "It was exciting because I didn't play in a few varsity games. Next year I hope to improve as a player and to get moves up as varsity permanent."

Unplayoff the ground, junior Justin Lynn states a win. "This season could have been better," said Lynn. "But we had a lot of good moments and we had a lot of fun. I like playing game but sometimes I don't like the pressure that comes with it."

Talking a good game, Freshman Ryan Fentress makes a goal. "I worked very hard this year to improve and I ended up playing in a few varsity games," said Fentress. "Next year I hope to make the varsity team."

With great strength, speed and a strong background, senior Kenneth Harris is one of the most talented players in the area. After a strong performance during the season, Harris was named to the LAC 1st team and was named to the LAC 2nd team and the LAC All-Area team. Harris was also named to the LAC 1st team and the LAC 2nd team. Harris was also named to the LAC 1st team and the LAC 2nd team. Harris was also named to the LAC 1st team and the LAC 2nd team.

The boys' basketball team, coached by Shawn Mathis, spent the last two weeks of the season in the conference championship game. The team finished the season with a 19-1 record and a 10-0 record in conference play. The team's success was due to their strong defense and their ability to shoot from the outside.

During the last two weeks of the season, Jason Leal, the team's leading scorer, was in excellent form. He averaged 15 points per game and was a key player in the team's success. The team's defense was also a major factor in their success, as they held their opponents to low scoring games.

Giving a team a little extra time to pump and dump could give up the sidekick. Sunday night, the team met in coach rooms at 11:30 p.m. and were final in the morning. "I'm sure it was a hard and dedicated," Head Coach Travis Walls said. "I'm off for these kids this year," Coach Paul Chandler added. "As the season progressed, the team did a great job of staying standing the entire night," Chandler said. "That was a big sign of my success and a great character builder for the

Team Advances to State Finals

Besides an impressive opponent, sophomore Nicholas Lam-On threw down a headlock as Head Coach Travis Walls and Coach Paul Chandler look on. "I thought going to state this year was awesome," Lam-On said. "I was disappointed that I just hurt in my first match and didn't get to wrestle the best of the big out in Indiana. I'll be back next year and hope I can have a second chance."

1st Place

Knowing that his team was extremely talented this year, Angel Escobedo had no doubts when the wrestling team would be competing for a state title. Winning a state title himself in the 125 lb weight class was the season highlight.

"It felt great. All eleven years that I have been wrestling, I've worked to win a state title and it's the best. During my matches, I wanted to win total domination because I was so determined and wanted to win so bad. I was also thinking how I couldn't let myself down or the people that came to watch."

Escobedo's favorite wrestling moment for the season was when Nicholas Lam-Chi pinned the Lawrence (North) opponent to seal the mark.

Tsirtsis

Alexander Tsirtsis has been wrestling since he was 8 1/2 years old. He has won eight national titles, ten freestyle state titles, and three consecutive high school state titles in his career. His favorite wrestling moment was winning the state title with Andres Hernandez and Angel Escobedo this year.

"I had a good feeling that we would win. We seemed to have a healthy team this year and we matched up well against most teams."

Entering the mat, junior Justin Lynn had his opponent—Cory Kasper—down in no time. "After the match, we were all excited and exhausted," Kasper said. "The match was like the [previous] one, but it was an 11-0 win. I was really tired, but I was really happy and I was really proud of myself."

Tsirtsis won his match, and Jose Escobedo won the crowd went to the top of the arena. "I was really excited and I was really happy to win the state title," Tsirtsis said. "I was really proud of myself and I was really happy to win the state title."

Santana Adams was the top scorer and a state champion. "I was really happy to win the state title," Adams said. "I was really proud of myself and I was really happy to win the state title."

"I was very happy to win state, because it felt like I finally won something, but it was amazing. During the last match I was just thinking not to do anything stupid and use [wrestling my best]."

Analrae Hernandez has been wrestling for the past fifteen years. He has won high school state titles. He was, three years ago, placed third at nationals. Two years ago, and qualified to Poland for team USA. In 2000.

"I thought she then was going to make it. To state, Everyone on the team wanted to make it, and we worked hard at practices."

Ashley Babbitt

"I like cheering during football season, because the squad is more spread out to do cheers and mounts. The fans also tend to get more involved with the game."

What season is best to perform in?

Katie Govert

"I think that basketball season is more fun to perform for because we do more tricks and harder dance moves. Football is more of a pom visual, while during basketball, we get to dance around more."

Melissa Powell

"I enjoyed both, but I loved performing for the football crowds. They went wild when we performed at games. The only downfall was being in the cold."

Money seemed constantly in short supply for every student. Some ran up debt preparing for formal dances, while others spent their cash on mashed potato eating contests on ranch steak day, but lack of the green stuff was a universal high school phenomenon.

Spending money was never a problem, but making it on the other hand, was more of a chore. Good jobs were hard to come by and unfortunately not everyone could earn money providing "service with a smile" as the maintenance crew did.

Parents, especially of underclassmen were generally the first back up in a money emergency.

However, when senior personals were available upperclassmen were at the mercy of their guardians, and many sucked up in the hopes that an embarrassing picture from pre-school wouldn't be published.

In an era where teens have more purchasing power than ever before, it is no surprise that advertising, especially within the school, was aimed at students everyday. If we learned nothing this year, we at least know that "Nothing else is a Peps1."

From the day you were born you were so special. So smart, so sensitive, so good. It was fun being with you. As you grew you became your own person with your own ideas. It's been exciting watching you grow & become independent. Still special, still smart, still sensitive, still good. I am so proud of the person you are and always know that I love you.

CLOSING

STUDENT LIFE / ACADEMICS / PEOPLE / ORGANIZATIONS / SPORTS / ADVERTISEMENTS

Another short year flew by, and before students knew it, they had no reason to wake up at 6:30 every morning. Though most students were glad to leave the school and the construction hassles behind, others looked back with a little sadness. Seniors would not be returning, at least until this yearbook was in and ready to be picked up, and all underclassmen returning for the 2004 school year would greet a completely finished, renovated school. This was the end of an era, in more ways than one.

The end of the year moved at lightning pace, and soon seniors were taking finals, eating hotdogs and leaving the underclassmen in class for another week. Though most mixed classes called it quits before the last week. Though most mixed classes called it quits before the last week, a few, A.P. biology most notably, refused to slow the pace for the end of the year.

Sports also continued beyond the academic year. While no spring teams went far in the post-season tournaments, many fall teams were already preparing for the upcoming season by the first week out of classes.

Summer school also began promptly the week after classes ended, and those who had so left so happy returned slightly less enthusiastically.

2003 was a year of goodbyes. Of course goodbyes were sent to departing seniors, but also this year to three departing department heads. English head Judith Surovek, business head Timothy Foss and science chair Sandra M. Beahm all taught their last class and left for greener pastures in retirement. We also waved our final goodbyes to the construction workers we'd grown so familiar with, an especially difficult farewell for some girls who had picked their favorites. Most importantly, however, we all said goodbye to another year of our lives. Most of us grew and matured, physically if not mentally and emotionally. And if right now we don't realize or appreciate this place and this year, time will teach us the importance of a year Somewhere In Between.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office for National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- Older people should be able to live independently in their own homes for as long as possible.
- Older people should be able to access the services and support they need to live independently.
- Older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- Older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key objectives for the future of older people's services, including:

- To ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need to live independently.
- To ensure that older people are able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives.
- To ensure that older people live in a safe and secure environment.

The strategy also sets out a number of key actions for the future of older people's services, including:

- To ensure that older people have access to the services and support they need to live independently.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) (1999a).

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the efficiency of public sector organisations, and to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver services in a cost-effective manner. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector corporations, and the implementation of public sector reform.

The purpose of this paper is to review the literature on public sector reform, and to identify the key issues that are currently facing public sector organisations. The paper is structured as follows: Section 2 discusses the background to public sector reform, and Section 3 reviews the literature on public sector reform. Section 4 identifies the key issues that are currently facing public sector organisations, and Section 5 discusses the implications of these issues for public sector reform.

2. Background to public sector reform

The public sector has been the subject of a number of reforms in recent years. These reforms have been driven by a number of factors, including the need to improve the efficiency of public sector organisations, the need to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver services in a cost-effective manner, and the need to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the public.

One of the key factors driving public sector reform is the need to improve the efficiency of public sector organisations. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector corporations, and the implementation of public sector reform.

Another key factor driving public sector reform is the need to ensure that the public sector is able to deliver services in a cost-effective manner. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector corporations, and the implementation of public sector reform.

A third key factor driving public sector reform is the need to ensure that the public sector is able to meet the needs of the public. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector corporations, and the implementation of public sector reform.

The purpose of this paper is to review the literature on public sector reform, and to identify the key issues that are currently facing public sector organisations. Section 4 identifies the key issues that are currently facing public sector organisations, and Section 5 discusses the implications of these issues for public sector reform.

3. Literature on public sector reform

The literature on public sector reform is extensive, and covers a wide range of issues. This section reviews the literature on public sector reform, and identifies the key issues that are currently facing public sector organisations.

One of the key issues facing public sector organisations is the need to improve the efficiency of public sector organisations. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of performance indicators, the establishment of public sector corporations, and the implementation of public sector reform.

COLOPHON

Work on the 2003 Reflector began during the summer of 2002, when the 2002 book was still undergoing final changes. The theme, "Somewhere in Between," which stands for both the middle stage of school renovation and for high school as middle stage of life was decided upon by the editor-in-chief, Mary Turkowski and thoughtfully developed by all 14 members of the staff.

With patience and determination, the staff became familiar with 15 brand new eMacs and produced Reflector Volume 62 on time. Spreads were printed on a hp LaserJet 4100n and photographers took advantage of a Sony Mavica 73. The spread were designed using PageMaker 6.5, VistaScan 2.0, AppleWorks 6.0 and Photoshop 5.5.

This book was printed by Herff Jones at 6015 Travis Lane, P.O. Box 10, Shawnee Mission, Kansas. The staff would like to thank Herff Jones representative Lisa Keene and customer service advisor Julie Bogart.

The colors of the book, inspired by our school colors, were HJ960 Gold and black. These colors were used on the endsheets, title page, and throughout the first two signatures of the book. Theme pages, including endsheets, title page, opening, closing, dividers and colophon, were designed by Mary Turkowski, who also designed the people section. Other sections were designed by editors Stephanie Staples, Christina Boncela, Emily Gierman, Kristen Buehler and Christina Saldana. The cover was designed by Mary Turkowski, but generated by the plant.

The book was divided into the traditional six sections of Student Life, Academics, Sports, Organizations, People, and Advertisements. Each section was given its own identity by use of design and fonts, but unity throughout the book could be found in that all copy blocks were in PicaSW-Plain 10 point size, and all captions were in Write 9 point size. Other fonts used were Wurker, Action Is, Abscissa, Fontdinerdotcom Loungy, Dream of me, and Times.

Staff photographers not only shot over 5,000 frames of T-max 400 and 3200 speed black and white and color film, but developed and printed the black and white film in the J-room darkroom on Kodak Polycontrast IIRC black and white paper. All color film was developed by Osco in Griffith, Indiana. Team, group, faculty, and senior pictures were produced by Larry Titak Photography, and all underclassmen photos were taken by Interstate Studios, Inc.

The Reflector staff is a member of the Quill and Scroll Society, as well as the Indiana High School Press Association.

The goal of the staff was to include as many students as possible and produce the best book given their resources. The editor and staff would like to send a special thanks to Miss Kraiko for her guidance and support in her first year, but mostly for not being Mr. Sheehan.
